Acting Chief, Administrative Appeals Office

DISCUSSION: The preference visa petition was denied by the Director, Nebraska Service Center. The petition is now before the Administrative Appeals Office (AAO) on appeal. The appeal will be dismissed.

The petitioner is an agrochemical business. It seeks to employ the beneficiary permanently in the United States as a director, Americas. As required by statute, the petition is accompanied by ETA Form 9089, Application for Permanent Employment Certification, approved by the United States Department of Labor (DOL). The director determined that the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage beginning on the priority date of the visa petition. The director denied the petition accordingly.

The record shows that the appeal is properly filed, timely and makes a specific allegation of error in law or fact. The procedural history in this case is documented by the record and incorporated into the decision. Further elaboration of the procedural history will be made only as necessary.

As set forth in the director's July 24, 2012 denial, the primary issue in this case is whether the petitioner has the ability to pay the proffered wage as of the priority date and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence.

In pertinent part, section 203(b)(2) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (the Act), 8 U.S.C. § 1153(b)(2), provides immigrant classification to members of the professions holding advanced degrees or their equivalent and whose services are sought by an employer in the United States. An advanced degree is a United States academic or professional degree or a foreign equivalent degree above the baccalaureate level. 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(k)(2). The regulation further states: "A United States baccalaureate degree or a foreign equivalent degree followed by at least five years of progressive experience in the specialty shall be considered the equivalent of a master's degree. If a doctoral degree is customarily required by the specialty, the alien must have a United States doctorate or a foreign equivalent degree." Id.

Section 203(b)(2) of the Act also includes aliens "who because of their exceptional ability in the sciences, arts or business, will substantially benefit prospectively the national economy, cultural or educational interests, or welfare of the United States." The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(k)(2) defines "exceptional ability" as "a degree of expertise significantly above that ordinarily encountered."

The regulation at 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2) states in pertinent part:

> Ability of prospective employer to pay wage. Any petition filed by or for an employment-based immigrant which requires an offer of employment must be accompanied by evidence that the prospective United States employer has the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner must demonstrate this ability at the time the priority date is established and continuing until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. Evidence of this ability shall be either in the form of copies of annual reports, federal tax returns, or audited financial statements.

The petitioner must demonstrate the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date, which is the date the ETA Form 9089 was accepted for processing by any office within the employment system of the DOL. See 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(d).

Here, the ETA Form 9089 was accepted on March 9, 2009. The proffered wage as stated on the ETA Form 9089 is $58,000.00 per year. The ETA Form 9089 states that the position requires a doctorate degree in plant pathology or related field and 3 years of experience in a related field such as Director, Americas, International Director, Senior Executive or similar. The petitioner also indicated that a foreign educational equivalent is acceptable.

The AAO conducts appellate review on a de novo basis. See Soltane v. DOJ, 381 F.3d 143, 145 (3d Cir. 2004). The AAO considers all pertinent evidence in the record, including new evidence properly submitted upon appeal.[1]

The evidence in the record of proceeding shows that the petitioner is structured as a C corporation. On the petition, the petitioner claimed to have been established in 1995 and to have 151 U.S. employees.[2] According to the tax returns in the record, the petitioner's fiscal year is based on a calendar year. On the ETA Form 9089, signed by the beneficiary, the beneficiary claims to have been employed by the petitioner since October 1, 2007.

The petitioner must establish that its job offer to the beneficiary is a realistic one. Because the filing of an ETA Form 9089 establishes a priority date for any immigrant petition later based on the ETA Form 9089, the petitioner must establish that the job offer was realistic as of the priority date and that the offer remained realistic for each year thereafter, until the beneficiary obtains lawful permanent residence. The petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is an essential element in evaluating whether a job offer is realistic. See Matter of Great Wall, 16 I&N Dec. 142 (Acting Reg. Comm. 1977); see also 8 C.F.R. § 204.5(g)(2). In evaluating whether a job offer is realistic, United States Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS) requires the petitioner to demonstrate financial resources sufficient to pay the beneficiary's proffered wages, although the totality of the circumstances affecting the petitioning business will be considered if the evidence warrants such consideration. See Matter of Sonegawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612 (Reg. Comm. 1967).

In determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage during a given period, USCIS will first examine whether the petitioner employed and paid the beneficiary during that period. If the petitioner establishes by documentary evidence that it employed the beneficiary at a salary

[1] The submission of additional evidence on appeal is allowed by the instructions to the Form I-290B, which are incorporated into the regulations at 8 C.F.R. § 103.2(a)(1).

[2] On appeal, the petitioner indicates that this number means 151 employees worldwide, and 1 employee in the U.S., and that the error was an oversight. The AAO accepts this explanation.

equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the evidence will be considered prima facie proof of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

The record of proceeding contains evidence of wages paid to the beneficiary as shown in the table below:

- In 2009, the Form W-2 stated total wages of $36,000.00 (a deficiency of $22,000.00).
- In 2010, the petitioner submitted direct deposit vouchers, pay stubs and payroll records indicating payment to the beneficiary in April through December, the year-to-date employee totals on the payroll records dated 12/1/2010 indicate $42,533.33 in 2010 payments to the beneficiary (a $15,466.67 deficiency).
- In 2011, the IRS Form W-2 stated total wages of $60,000.00.
- In 2012, the petitioner submitted two direct deposit vouchers and pay stubs issued to the beneficiary in May and June. The June voucher indicates year-to-date total payments of $31,000.00 (a deficiency of $27,000.00).

If, as in this case, the petitioner does not establish that it employed and paid the beneficiary an amount at least equal to the proffered wage during that period, USCIS will next examine the net income figure reflected on the petitioner's federal income tax return, without consideration of depreciation or other expenses. River Street Donuts, LLC v. Napolitano, 558 F.3d 111 (1st Cir. 2009); Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d 873 (E.D. Mich. 2010), aff'd, No. 10-1517 (6th Cir. filed Nov. 10, 2011). Reliance on federal income tax returns as a basis for determining a petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage is well established by judicial precedent. Elatos Restaurant Corp. v. Sava, 632 F. Supp. 1049, 1054 (S.D.N.Y. 1986) (citing Tongatapu Woodcraft Hawaii, Ltd. v. Feldman, 736 F.2d 1305 (9th Cir. 1984)); see also Chi-Feng Chang v. Thornburgh, 719 F. Supp. 532 (N.D. Texas 1989); K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. 1080 (S.D.N.Y. 1985); Ubeda v. Palmer, 539 F. Supp. 647 (N.D. Ill. 1982), aff'd, 703 F.2d 571 (7th Cir. 1983). Reliance on the petitioner's gross receipts and wage expense is misplaced. Showing that the petitioner's gross receipts exceeded the proffered wage is insufficient. Similarly showing that the petitioner paid wages in excess of the proffered wage is insufficient.

In K.C.P. Food Co., Inc. v. Sava, 623 F. Supp. at 1084, the court held that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, now USCIS, had properly relied on the petitioner's net income figure, as stated on the petitioner's corporate income tax returns, rather than the petitioner's gross income. The court specifically rejected the argument that USCIS should have considered income before expenses were paid rather than net income. See Taco Especial v. Napolitano, 696 F. Supp. 2d at 881 (gross profits overstate an employer's ability to pay because it ignores other necessary expenses).

With respect to depreciation, the court in River Street Donuts noted:

> The AAO recognized that a depreciation deduction is a systematic allocation > of the cost of a tangible long-term asset and does not represent a specific cash expenditure during the year claimed. Furthermore, the AAO indicated that the allocation of the depreciation of a long-term asset could be spread out over the years or concentrated into a few depending on the petitioner's choice of accounting and depreciation methods. Nonetheless, the AAO explained that depreciation represents an actual cost of doing business, which could represent either the diminution in value of buildings and equipment or the accumulation of funds necessary to replace perishable equipment and buildings. Accordingly, the AAO stressed that even though amounts deducted for depreciation do not represent current use of cash, neither does it represent amounts available to pay wages.

> We find that the AAO has a rational explanation for its policy of not adding depreciation back to net income. Namely, that the amount spent on a long term tangible asset is a "real" expense.

River Street Donuts at 118. "[USCIS] and judicial precedent support the use of tax returns and the net income figures in determining petitioner's ability to pay. Plaintiffs' argument that these figures should be revised by the court by adding back depreciation is without support." Chi-Feng Chang at 537 (emphasis added).

For a C corporation, USCIS considers net income to be the figure shown on Line 28 of the Form 1120, U.S. Corporation Income Tax Return. The petitioner's 2010 tax return is the most recent tax return in the record. The proffered wage is $58,000.00 per year. The petitioner paid in excess of the proffered wage in 2011. The petitioner's tax returns demonstrate its net income as shown in the table below:

- In 2009, the Form 1120 stated net income of -$64,129.00.
- In 2010, the Form 1120 stated net income of -$110,430.00.

Therefore, for the years 2009 and 2010, the petitioner did not establish that it had sufficient net income to pay the difference between wages paid to the beneficiary and the proffered wage.

As an alternate means of determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage, USCIS may review the petitioner's net current assets. Net current assets are the difference between the petitioner's current assets and current liabilities.[3] A corporation's year-end current assets are shown on Schedule L, lines 1 through 6. Its year-end current liabilities are shown on lines 16 through 18. If the total of a corporation's end-of-year net current assets and the wages paid to

[3]According to Barron's Dictionary of Accounting Terms 117 (3rd ed. 2000), "current assets" consist of items having (in most cases) a life of one year or less, such as cash, marketable securities, inventory and prepaid expenses. "Current liabilities" are obligations payable (in most cases) within one year, such accounts payable, short-term notes payable, and accrued expenses (such as taxes and salaries). Id. at 118.

the beneficiary (if any) are equal to or greater than the proffered wage, the petitioner is expected to be able to pay the proffered wage using those net current assets.

USCIS will not consider the petitioner's total assets in evaluating its ability to pay the proffered wage. These total assets include items such as equipment and real estate which the petitioner needs to do business. It is unlikely that such assets would be sold in order to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage. Rather, USCIS will review current assets and liabilities in assessing the petitioner's likely capabilities. The petitioner's tax returns demonstrate its end-of-year net current assets as shown in the table below:

- In 2009, the Form 1120 stated net current assets of $6,029.00.
- In 2010, the Form 1120 stated net current assets of $4,985.00.

Therefore, for the years 2009 and 2010, the petitioner did not establish that it had sufficient net current assets to pay the difference between wages paid to the beneficiary and the proffered wage.

Therefore, from the date the ETA Form 9089 was accepted for processing by the DOL, other than in 2011, the petitioner had not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the beneficiary the proffered wage as of the priority date through an examination of wages paid to the beneficiary, or its net income or net current assets.

On appeal, counsel asserts that the director erred in not properly taking into account the totality of circumstances and failing to accurately assess the evidence. Counsel further asserts that the petitioner is a foreign company doing business in the United States as a U.S. employer and that it uses non-U.S.-sourced income to pay the beneficiary's salary.

Counsel asserts that the petitioner provided audited financial statements evidencing its ability to pay the proffered wage. The record of proceeding contains copies of audited financial statements for 2009 for a [redacted]l that is located in New Deli, India. Counsel asserts that this business is the petitioner and that the audited financial statements should be considered in determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage in 2009. Contrary to counsel's statements the figures (in rupees) that appear on the audited financial statement do not indicate that the petitioner is a wholly owned entity that may rely on the overseas company for assets. Furthermore, the petitioner indicated, under penalty of perjury, on its IRS Forms 1120 for 2009 and 2010 at Schedule K.4, that no foreign or domestic corporation, partnership (including any entity treated as a partnership), trust, or tax-exempt organization owned directly 20% or more, or owned, directly or indirectly, 50% or more of the total voting power or all classes of the corporation's stock entitle to vote. In addition, at Schedule K.7, the petitioner indicated that no foreign person owned, directly or indirectly, at least 25% of the total voting power of all classes of the corporation's stock entitle to vote.

Although the petitioner claims that the foreign entity paid the beneficiary's salary, there is no claim of foreign ownership on the petitioner's tax returns. The Forms W-2 and director deposit vouchers were issued by the petitioner, a U.S. business entity with a Federal Employer Identification Number and a main business address in the United States. There is no evidence in the record to demonstrate the existence of a parent subsidiary relationship, a branch relationship, or an affiliate relationship. Doubt cast on any aspect of the petitioner's proof may, of course, lead to a reevaluation of the reliability and sufficiency of the remaining evidence offered in support of the visa petition. It is incumbent on the petitioner to resolve any inconsistencies in the record by independent objective evidence, and attempts to explain or reconcile such inconsistencies, absent competent objective evidence pointing to where the truth, in fact, lies, will not suffice. See Matter of Ho, 19 I&N Dec. 582, 591-592 (BIA 1988).

In the instant matter, the petitioner will be treated as a US corporation that is a separate and distinct legal entity. Because a corporation is a separate and distinct legal entity from its owners and shareholders, the assets of its shareholders or of other enterprises or corporations cannot be considered in determining the petitioning corporation's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Aphrodite Investments, Ltd., 17 I&N Dec. 530 (Comm'r 1980). In a similar case, the court stated, "nothing in the governing regulation, 8 C.F.R. § 204.5, permits [USCIS] to consider the financial resources of individuals or entities who have no legal obligation to pay the wage." See Sitar v. Ashcroft, 2003 WL 22203713 (D.Mass. Sept. 18, 2003).

Counsel asserts that additional financial resources are available to the petitioner and should be considered in determining the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. Counsel cites to two AAO decisions; one involving a personal service corporation and one involving a sole proprietorship in which the AAO took into consideration the owner's salary, income and/or personal assets. It is noted that the instant petitioner is a C corporation, and as such, is treated as a separate and distinct legal entity from its owners and shareholders. Therefore, as noted above, the assets of its shareholders or of other enterprises cannot be considered in determining the petitioning corporation's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Aphrodite Investments, Ltd., 17 I&N Dec. at 530.

Counsel's assertions and the evidence presented on appeal do not outweigh the evidence of record that demonstrates that the petitioner could not pay the proffered wage from the day the ETA Form 9089 was accepted for processing by the DOL.

USCIS may consider the overall magnitude of the petitioner's business activities in its determination of the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage. See Matter of Sonegawa, 12 I&N Dec. 612. The petitioning entity in Sonegawa had been in business for over 11 years and routinely earned a gross annual income of about $100,000. During the year in which the petition was filed in that case, the petitioner changed business locations and paid rent on both the old and new locations for five months. There were large moving costs and also a period of time when the petitioner was unable to do regular business. The Regional Commissioner determined that the petitioner's prospects for a resumption of successful business operations were well established. The petitioner was a fashion designer whose work had been featured in Time and Look magazines. Her clients included Miss Universe, movie actresses, and society matrons. The petitioner's clients had been included in the lists of the best-dressed California women. The petitioner lectured on fashion design at design and fashion shows throughout the United States and at colleges and universities in California. The Regional Commissioner's determination in Sonegawa was based in part on the petitioner's sound business reputation and outstanding reputation as a couturiere. As in Sonegawa, USCIS may, at its discretion, consider evidence relevant to the petitioner's financial ability that falls outside of a petitioner's net income and net current assets. USCIS may consider such factors as the number of years the petitioner has been doing business, the established historical growth of the petitioner's business, the overall number of employees, the occurrence of any uncharacteristic business expenditures or losses, the petitioner's reputation within its industry, whether the beneficiary is replacing a former employee or an outsourced service, or any other evidence that USCIS deems relevant to the petitioner's ability to pay the proffered wage.

In assessing the totality of the circumstances in this case, it is concluded that the petitioner has not established that it had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage. There are no facts paralleling those in Sonegawa that are present in the instant matter to a degree sufficient to establish that the petitioner had the ability to pay the proffered wage. The petitioner has not established that the relevant years were uncharacteristically unprofitable or difficult years for the petitioner's business. Neither has the petitioner established its reputation within the industry.

Accordingly, the evidence submitted does not establish that the petitioner had the continuing ability to pay the proffered wage beginning on the priority date.

Beyond the decision of the director, the beneficiary is listed as the registered agent or reserving party for the petitioning corporation on the Iowa Secretary of State Corporate database. The petitioner says that she is the sole employee and thus cannot perform recruitment for herself. Further, Matter of Silver Dragon Chinese Restaurant, 19 I&N Dec. 401 (Comm'r 1986), discussed a beneficiary's 50% ownership of the petitioning entity. The decision quoted an advisory opinion from the Chief of DOL's Division of Foreign Labor Certification as follows:

> The regulations require a 'job opportunity' to be 'clearly open.' Requiring the job opportunity to be bona fide adds no substance to the regulations, but simply clarifies that the job must truly exist and not merely exist on paper. The administrative interpretation thus advances the purpose of regulation 656.20(c)(8). Likewise requiring the job opportunity to be bona fide clarifies that a true opening must exist, and not merely the functional equivalent of self-employment. Thus, the administrative construction advances the purpose of regulations 656.20.

Id. at 405. Accordingly, where the beneficiary named in an alien labor certification application has an ownership interest in the petitioning entity, the petitioner must establish that the job is bona fide, or clearly open to U.S. workers. See Keyjoy Trading Co., 1987-INA-592 (BALCA Dec. 15, 1987) (en banc). A relationship invalidating a bona fide job offer may also arise where the beneficiary is related to the petitioner by "blood" or it may "be financial, by marriage, or through friendship." See Matter of Sunmart 374, 2000-INA-93 (BALCA May 15, 2000).

The ETA Form 9089 specifically asks in Section C.9: "Is the employer a closely held corporation, partnership, or sole proprietorship in which the alien has an ownership interest, or is there a familial relationship between the owners, stockholders, partners, corporate officers, incorporators, and the alien?" The petitioner identified that it was an entity with two employees, and checked "yes" to the question of whether the beneficiary was related to the owner. In determining whether the job is subject to the alien's influence and control, the adjudicator will look to the totality of the circumstances. See Modular Container Systems, Inc., 1989-INA-228 (BALCA Jul. 16, 1991) (en banc). The same standard has been incorporated into the PERM regulations. See 69 Fed. Reg. 77326, 77356 (ETA) (Dec. 27, 2004).

The PERM regulation specifically addresses this issue at 20 C.F.R. § 656.17(l) and states in pertinent part:

> (l) Alien influence and control over job opportunity. If the employer is a closely held corporation or partnership in which the alien has an ownership interest, or if there is a familial relationship between the stockholders, corporate officers, incorporators, or partners, and the alien, or if the alien is one of a small number of employees, the employer in the event of an audit must be able to demonstrate the existence of a bona fide job opportunity, i.e., the job is available to all U.S. workers, and must provide to the Certifying Officer, the following supporting documentation:
> (1) A copy of the articles of incorporation, partnership agreement, business license or similar documents that establish the business entity;
> (2) A list of all corporate/company officers and shareholders/partners of the corporation/firm/business, their titles and positions in the business' structure, and a description of the relationships to each other and to the alien beneficiary;
> (3) The financial history of the corporation/company/partnership, including the total investment in the business entity and the amount of investment of each officer, incorporator/partner and the alien beneficiary; and
> (4) The name of the business' official with primary responsibility for interviewing and hiring applicants for positions within the organization and the name(s) of the business' official(s) having control or influence over hiring decisions involving the position for which labor certification is sought.
> (5) If the alien is one of 10 or fewer employees, the employer must document any family relationship between the employees and the alien.

The petitioner has the burden of establishing that a bona fide job opportunity exists when asked to show that the job opportunity is clearly open to U.S. workers. See Matter of Amger Corp., 87-INA-545 (BALCA 1987); see also 8 U.S.C. § 1361.

The petition will be denied for the above stated reasons, with each considered as an independent and alternative basis for denial. In visa petition proceedings, the burden of proving eligibility for the benefit sought remains entirely with the petitioner. Section 291 of the Act, 8 U.S.C. § 1361. Here, that burden has not been met.

ORDER: The appeal is dismissed.
